

“My physiology professor at University of San Francisco really encouraged me and my classmates to go to medical school,” she recalls. “But I wanted to be a winemaker. So he set me up to work at his friend’s small winery in Australia, hoping that the backbreaking work would make me run for the hills. Well, it did. The hills just happen to be covered with vines.”

- With over 15 years of winemaking experience, Jen’s first experience in California winemaking was at Cline Cellars, followed by ten years at Ravenswood working under the mentorship of Joel Peterson (The Godfather of Zin)
- Jen joined Huneus Vintners & The Prisoner Wine Company in August 2011 and because of her talents the Huneus family couldn’t let her go in the sale of The Prisoner